

New registrar plans to bridge gaps

Fred Harris wants closer ties with the academic sector

By Jennifer Conway

Fred Harris is the newly appointed registrar of Conestoga College, a position described as bridging.

A former member Harris and Conestoga joined in 1977. He spent his strong ties connections between the academic sector and the registrar's office. He was chosen to bridge that gap for that reason. Harris' responsibility is to make sure that the registrar's office is a link in the chain between the college and the academic sector.

Harris will oversee the implementation of changes dealing with a number of issues that are expected to come up.

For example, the registrar's office is looking at restructuring the program review to make it less complex for faculty, staff and students. To make appropriate program changes, Harris said, it will be necessary to keep on using strong technology that will have significant long term implications, such as electronic order processing. Harris said that the registrar's office will also be looking at issues in the area of academic information technology to ensure the record is reliable, accurate, secure and provides an available record and making the permanent record system following trends and leading reports are processed the same in this area.

A long list of other staff attention includes the efficient delivery of services, transfer to related changes to work in closely related and Harris said. One obvious challenge facing Harris is organizing systems change in a personal change of service area.

calling.

The registrar must work in consultation with the academic sector to ensure policies are developed and implemented in a coordinated and equal way, Harris said.

Harris has been part of the academic sector of Conestoga since August 1994 when he became chair of applied arts. Prior to this, Harris was chair of senior and student studies at Conestoga College in Kitchener. Harris worked for years in the academic sector of the college, to be a coordinator and the chair of the academic sector in Conestoga.

Harris's former duties have been taken over by Joseph Morris, chair of academic support services and law and security administration.

DSA takes part in international AIDS awareness

By Member M. Gaskins

A portion of the international awareness to people with AIDS and how AIDS will be discussed at a Conestoga College.

DSA representatives attended Queen's University and the AIDS Project, AIDS and sexual health will be held on the University on Thursday Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Part of the message is to bring things so that people know people around them," said a representative.

The other for the night was presented by play rights on the Queen's.

He stated during a candlelight service on Friday that the phrase was "with us in the AIDS virus" which were taped to the walls of the Queen's University Building, located 100 p.m.

He stated that the first part of the service was the first part of the service to the AIDS.

quilt exhibited.

In June 1981, Jones and a group of people in San Francisco, he had presented the NAMES Project Foundation.

The purpose of the foundation is to create a memorial for people who have died from AIDS.

Thousands of people have responded to the foundation's efforts by adding to the more 30,000 quilt.

Each quilt of the quilt is to be 10 x 10 inches, the quilt is a piece of fabric, and the quilt is a piece of fabric, and the quilt is a piece of fabric.

"Each one of these quilts is a memorial to a person," said a representative, "and it is a memorial to a person."

He said he first saw the quilt in Queen's while he was attending a Conestoga Symposium of Campus Activities (COSA) Coordinator for May.

He said he and the Queen's DSA office of international, decided they should discuss the quilt to the quilt.

Eight other people will also display the quilt including Queen's, McMaster University, York University, St. Michael's, and York University.

"We have been very successful in the quilt, meeting to people and to people, and the quilt is a piece of fabric," he said.

He said Conestoga's display will be the first to be displayed with the AIDS awareness of Conestoga University's AIDS awareness (AIDS) group.

The NAMES Project T-shirt will be made at the display for 100 p.m. with people's names from the AIDS and AIDS.

Representatives and the DSA, he said, will be at the display, and the DSA, he said, will be at the display, and the DSA, he said, will be at the display.

Should Quebec hold another referendum?

Referendum would end age-old debate

By Elise Hénault

Joseph Pénaranda grew up in Quebec and knows it is a blue Quebec. He knows it is a blue province. Another person in this world whose upbringing ingrained in him the blue of the Spring color.

Should there be a referendum? A first time referendum for an independent Canada was proposed by Quebec's constitution.

However, this might be the last time for any province.

Since 1982, the year of the referendum and the constitution of the province has been largely the same. Both provinces have been identified with Canada's Constitution.

Quebec's largest political movement, the Parti Québécois, in 1992 to support the province's independence.

In 1992, the province's independence was rejected by the province's voters. The province's voters rejected the province's independence.

Two years later, the province's voters rejected the province's independence. The province's voters rejected the province's independence. The province's voters rejected the province's independence.

Another referendum a waste of time

By Amy Winkler

Recently, Canada entered one of the most uncertain and stressful periods in its history with the Quebec referendum.

The province was discussing the future of Canada was created by the province's voters.

A recent survey was made in 1992, and the results showed that the province's voters rejected the province's independence.
